Professional Learning Model

We design our courses to elevate professional growth and impact, which are the heart of our framework. Teaching Channel recognizes the learning process as an ongoing cycle characterized by the following key phases:

Course Content

EVOLVE Courses are self-paced and relevant, with resources that include a solid balance of research and applicability. All courses feature video clips, articles, and interactive elements to enhance and support learning. Participants will engage in the following:

- Activate prior knowledge in order to establish new learning goals.
- Access research-based resources and materials to deepen your understanding and broaden your skillset.
- Assess new learning with a Knowledge Check formative assessment.
- Complete activities to implement new learning in the classroom or school setting.
- Engage in student-to-student interaction in a discussion forum.
- Reflect on professional growth and consider the potential impact of newfound knowledge and skills.

To receive a letter of completion, participants must complete a Final Assessment and score 80% or higher.

Supporting Students with ADHD

Course Number: 208_25 | 3 Hours

This document is an outline of the course requirements and is subject to change.

Course Description

One in nine students in the U.S. now have an Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) diagnosis, which makes the classroom a challenging place to be for some students. These symptoms can significantly disrupt daily life, affecting school or work performance, relationships, and overall well-being. This course will illuminate what ADHD is, how you can guide students to appropriate classroom behavior, and the role of executive function in the lives of students with ADHD. Find out how students with ADHD can be successful in school!

Course Objectives

1. Define ADHD, identify its key characteristics, and explain how it affects students' learning and behavior within the classroom setting.
2. Develop effective behavior management and executive function strategies to support students with ADHD.
3. Challenge common misconceptions about ADHD, identify the strengths and potential benefits associated with ADHD, and describe the value of a strengths-based approach when supporting students with ADHD.

Course Materials

This course does not use a textbook. All required articles and resources are linked within the course modules.

Important! Courses are completed 100% online within the learning management system. You should have access to a compatible web browser (such as Google Chrome, Microsoft Edge, Apple Safari, and/or Mozilla Firefox). While our course platform does support mobile devices, for the best user experience, we recommend using a desktop or laptop computer to complete courses.

Course Delivery

All coursework will be completed and submitted online within the learning management system. Log-in to your account at www.teachingchannel.com to access your online course and view additional details for assignments.

- Explore a variety of educational resources, videos, and additional tools necessary for successful course completion.
- Complete module assignments including reflective journaling, opportunities to demonstrate new learning, and engagement in the discussion forum.

Grading & Feedback

Once you have successfully passed the Final Assessment (80% or higher), your letter of completion will be accessible on your Account page (after a few hours). Visit teachingchannel.com to sign into your Account.

Collaboration

Collaboration is a key component of the learning experience, designed to promote a supportive and inclusive learning environment where diverse perspectives are valued and respected. Teaching Channel asks learners to interact with their peers through discussions, participate with colleagues in collaborative assignments, and engage with embedded tech tools.

Academic Integrity

While collaboration is encouraged, each learner must complete their own assignments and assessments individually, ensuring the integrity and originality of their work. Any instances of academic dishonesty, including plagiarism or unauthorized sharing of work, will be addressed in accordance with Teaching Channel's Collaboration and Plagiarism Policy.
